

Southern Educational Psychology Services Conference

12th December 2003

SEMINAR ABSTRACT

Quality Relationships – reconstructing behaviour management

Simon Burnham Senior Educational Psychologist

Good teachers have never been in the business of ‘managing’ the behaviour of their pupils. Rather, they manage relationships well. Feuerstein’s ideas about mediation outline a model and a language of ‘good’ teaching/learning relationships. This session will address the question of what ‘behaviour management’ looks like if it is construed as mediation of children’s learning about behaviour.